Sgro Honored with NAPO President's Award

ORLANDO, Florida (May 2, 2009)—Valentina Sgro received the prestigious President's Award at this year's Annual Conference of the National Association of Professional Organizers (www.napo.net).

The President's Award is reserved for a member who has made outstanding contributions to NAPO, and is traditionally presented to highlight a significant contribution that has benefited NAPO and the general membership.

President Standolyn Robertson, in bestowing the award, praised Sgro for a large body of accomplishments, but especially singled out Sgro's work with insurance underwriters, convincing them that professional organizers were worth the risk and that the professional organizing industry was worth supporting.

"While sharing her knowledge and experience with NAPO, Val also developed her own business, SGRO Consulting, Solutions for Getting Really Organized. And, Val can take a left-brained, boring topic and turn it into a creative work of art. She is the author of two industry-related award-winning books," said Robertson.

"People who know me, know that I don't like surprises, but this one was pretty good," said Sgro. "Getting a standing ovation from over 700 professional organizers was very energizing."

Sgro can be reached through the SGRO Consulting website at www.reallyorganized.com.
